

While diversity is essential for power and fruitfulness of life, unity is necessary for its order, arrangement and stability. Unity we must create, not necessarily uniformity. If man could realize a perfect spiritual unity, no sort of uniformity would be necessary; for the most play of diversity would be security possible on that foundation.

While diversity is essential for power and fruitfulness of life, unity is necessary for its orderly arrangement and stability. Unity we must create, but not necessarily uniformity. If man could realize a perfect spiritual unity, no sort of uniformity would be necessary; for the utmost play of diversity would be security possible on that foundation.

