

While diversity is essential for power and fruitfulness of life, unity is necessary for its order, arrangement and stability. Unity is not necessarily uniformity. If man could realize a perfect unity, no sort of uniformity would be necessary; for the utmost of diversity would be security possible on that foundation.

